The GREATEST MOTHER

Dinner time in the Red Cross Camp at Natchez, Mississippi. The flood sufferers were served plenty of wholesome food.

A native Filipino Red Cross public health nurse busy at her round of duties supervising the care of sick children.

Thousands of disabled ex-service men in hospitals throughout the country still look to the Red Cross as "The Greatest Mother."

This little refugee had his arm bandaged by nurses in the camp hospital unit. Around these hospitals centered all Red Cross health work for flood sufferers.

A class of young men and women being taught how to resuscitate the drowning by an instructor of the American Red Cross.

When accidents occur, the fate of the patient is often decided by the type of first aid treatment during the first few minutes. The American Red Cross instructs thousands of persons each year in classes such as this.

NUMBER TWELVE

ALL OSCEOLA COUNTY IS CENTERED UPON ST. CLOUD WHERE ITS PEOPLE ARE ASSEMBLING TO OBSERVE NINTH ARMISTICE DAY ANNIVERSARY

The poem is by William E. Brooks, and can be found in an anthology, "The New Patriotism," edited by Thomas Curtis Clark and Esther A. Gillespie. It is a fitting message for the season of loving and admiring recollection which finds its culminating observance on Armistice day.

It is further stated from national headquarters that the organization will find itself in position to extend relief to the New England flood sufferers, if the country responds in sufficient numbers to reach the five million membership goal expected.

Mr. Henke's standard and ambition is that this band may make musical history in Florida and the recognition accorded him Sunday would indicate the appreciation of his earnest and intelligent effort. Whatever St. Cloud

Nine years ago, November 11, 1918, much of the civilized world forgot nearly every other emotion except an unbounded joy at the news that an armistice had been declared in the World war. A large and enthusiastic group of members and visitors attended the first meeting of the St. Louis Club, held in the club city park last Monday.

Dr. A. W. Hall, the guest speaker, inspired the enthusiastic and interesting remarks occasioned by the club's annual meeting. The new officers were:

FLORIDA

Up in the north we lived for years
Where people freeze their feet and ears
And suffer from the cold;
I said to Sal, my wife, "By Joe"
Made up my mind I'm going to go
"Where snow don't fall,"—I'm told.

"In Florida," I've heard folks say
"A man can work the livelong day
The entire winter thru;
And taters, corn and pumpkins grow
When we are ten feet under snow," —Seems too good to be true."

We sold the pigs, the cow, the mules
The neighbors called us "Bloomin' Fools"
But, all we had, we sold;
In Florida to try our luck
To farm and raise all kind o' track
And bid "Farewell" to cold.

With trunks and grips and bundles tied
We packed Old Lizzie high and wide
'Nd took the dog and cat;
Then, southward let old Lizzie sail
Along the Dixie Highway trail
And made good time,—at that.

A thousand times I've said to Sal,
"How glad we are, my dear old gal
That we have found a place;
Where roses bloom and grapefruit grow
While folks up north are under snow,"
—With smiles all o'er my face.

We love the mild, refreshing breeze,
The flowers, the palms, the cypress trees,
The hills, the lakes, the wood;
We love the welcome smile and cheer
We love the summer all the year,
We're here, "By Jove", for GOOD.

Why people stay up north and freeze
And whoop and cough and snort and sneeze
Is more than one can tell;
If they but knew the real delight
In Florida, by day,—by night,
They'd come, I know full well.

—DAD.

Good Men Suffer for the Sins of Others

The Cocoa Tribune sounds a timely warning or apology, as the case may be, concerning the necessity for ignoring pedestrians along the side of the road who hail motorists for a lift. Frequently we have to pass up young men, the writer says, because of the sins of others, for it seems that the well-bred looking boys are sometimes the worst kind of individuals.

Recently a gentleman from another state who was going to Miami to visit his son's family, was hailed by two boys under the age of twenty, one being about eighteen and the other fourteen. The man in the automobile stopped, picked them up to give them a lift toward their destination. In Martin county the owner of the car was shot through the head by the boys, who attempted to either take the car or rob the man. The gentleman's brain was pierced by the shot but he is said to be recovering, having left a West Palm Beach hospital last week. The sins of others along the highways make us feel wary about picking any one up to give him a lift. Too many murders and robberies have been committed by men picked up on the road for us to feel easy when a person hails us along the highways. They may be all right but why take a chance?

These Wives

Vicious, mildly rebellious wives of Chicopee, Massachusetts, prepared ten commandments for husbands and show that they do not understand the problem of husbands or marriage. It is useless to talk about details, including the double standard of morals. The problem is in two words, sympathy and justice. If a man is sympathetic and just, he will try to do what he ought to do. His success will depend on his age and his degree of semi-civilization.

Men, once as imperfect as the higher apes, are slowly improving, and marriage is the training school. Wives know it and prepare their matrimonial declamations chiefly for amusement. It interests them to think what a husband might be, if were not what he is.

Nearer reality is the "husband calling contest." At the Suffolk, Va., fair prizes were for wives that could call their husbands with a voice endearing and audible from afar. The wife combining endowment with extreme radius was to be crowned queen of husband callers. Unregenerate husbands will shudder at the thought of that penetrating, endearing call.

Wives have been engaged in that husband-calling contest for 200,000 years, first to get him, then to keep him. Their patience throughout the ages is amazing, the smallness of their reward pathetic.

Five Days at Least

The American Federation of Labor favors a five-day week, giving the worker two days out of seven. Russia's Government, exercising, all powers, establishes a seven-hour work-day, a long step from the serf slavery of old Russia. Those who start the five-day week, want men to have one day in which to spend what they earn in five days. Spending is as important to the country as earning, they say.

The value to workers of a seven-hour day, or five-day week, depends on what they do with the extra day or hour of freedom. If they read and think more, they will go ahead. If not, they will stay in the same place, but, in any case, the greater leisure will improve their health. That will make a better next generation, inclined to thought.

Robert A. Millikan, brilliant scientist of California Institute of Technology, tells students that science "will free human slaves," meaning, presumably, that science will free men from hard labor. Pray that it may not happen too soon. Free men today from the necessity that drives them, and 99 in 100 would become worthless. If you doubt it, contemplate those that inherit wealth, in so-called society.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

Don't Use the Heredity Alibi

Bertha Dix had a good article recently on the heredity alibi. She pointed out that this is one of the most abused alibis in the world and one of which the weaklings are especially fond.

It seems to be limited to the weaklings. No man who is honest, upright, and has the other virtues attributes it to the influence of his grandfather. He always takes credit for such things himself.

But when a man is a drunkard and loose in his sex life or otherwise self-indulgent, very often he or his mother for him will attribute it to the influence of his father's uncle or some such person.

If a man has a hereditary leaning for instance, towards liquor, why doesn't he leave it alone?

I know a man who is prominent in politics, himself the Governor of a State and his father before him a Governor. The father had been a great drunkard. For that reason his son never touched it. He knew the weakness was in his blood and he avoided it. This is the main thing for which heredity is good. It ought to teach us what kind of temptations to avoid.

Any man who goes to the devil is the maker of his own downfall. We never place a false stone in the edifice of our career unless we do it ourselves.

Likewise any man who achieves success is entitled to credit for it. Other people and events may have contributed to his venture, but they would have meant nothing without his cooperation.

The one thing that a successful man owes to his sense of responsibility. He is the master of his fate and he ought to be the captain of his soul.

Our true heredity is from God and we all have in us the power to make something of ourselves.

The Orientals deify their ancestors, but all we use them for is to put the blame of our actions on them. If killed.

everything that is said about heredity were true this world would steadily go to the dogs. As it is, it is growing better and it is improving because there is a continual crop of new babies entering into it and humanity is always starting again.

No matter what your father or mother or great uncles were, therefore, you should not be downhearted.

Dr. Johnson once asked a woman to marry him and she replied: "Sir, I cannot because my condition in life is not equal to yours. Besides, I have two uncles that have been hung."

He answered: "As far as position in life is concerned, all men are born equal, and as far as ancestors are concerned, while I have no uncles that have been hung, I have several relatives that ought to be hung."

Lepers so often suffer from other diseases that only about three per cent of them die from leprosy itself.

In the four minutes required to play Rubens' 'Stacato Etude,' a Chicago pianist found that he exerted a force of 14,700 pounds on the keyboard.

To obtain two ounces of poison used in the curing of snake bites, two hundred diamond-back rattlesnakes are killed.

INTRODUCTION

Archibald Bennett, wealthy bachelor, travels constantly in the interest of his health. He meets Isabel Perry, who recommends a life of crime, adventure, romance and excitement as a cure for his nerves. Archie goes to Bailey Harbor to investigate a summer house for his sister. A heavy storm forces him to spend the night there. During the night he is awakened by footsteps, and in an encounter with the intruder, who sees Archie's figure reflected in the mirror and shoots. Archie fires in return, wounding the intruder, who makes his escape. Archie plans flight to evade publicity. He starts across country at night. At dawn he is stopped on a lonely country road by "The Governor," master-mind criminal who mistakes him for a fellow criminal. Archie, fleeing, is afraid to tell the truth—falls in with "The Governor," is whisked across country in a stolen car. Sees story in newspaper of killing at Bailey Harbor and, frightened, he decides to say nothing but stick with his strange friend and avoid developments. At Concord, N. H., Archie comes upon Isabel Perry at the hotel desk but she refuses to recognize him. The Governor, by a clever plan, switches stolen money for good money. Archie need no longer—making love to a niece of agent sent to meet eccentric Gumpkin here next day. Archie and the Governor drive away without creating suspicion and speed across state to deliver the $50,000 to train-robbler Leary at Walker's farm, where Archie gets new insight into workings of the crime world. Now read on.

At the end of the month Walker left for town to get Leary on a train for Boston. The veteran train robber shook hands all round and waved last farewell from the gate. Archie was sorry to lose him, for Leary was an appealing old fellow, and he had hoped for a chance to coax from him some reminiscences of his experiences. Leary vanished into the starlit dusk as placidly as though he hadn't tucked away in his vesting story those tens of dollars to which he had no lawful right or title. There was something ludicrous in the whole proceeding. While Archie had an income of fifty thousand dollars a year from investments, he had always experienced a pleasant thrill at receiving the statement of his dividends from his personal clerk in the broker's office where he drew an additional ten thousand as a silent partner. Leary's method of dipping into the world's capital seemed quite as honorable as his own. Notwithstanding, he did say work for the money.

The Governor, smoking a pipe on the veranda and chatting with Mrs.

Walker, recalled him from his meditations to suggest that he show a decent spirit of appreciation of the Walker's hospitality by repairing to the kitchen and helping Sally with the dishes. In his youth Archie had been carefully instructed in the proper manner of entering a parlor, but it was with the greatest embarrassment that he sought Sally in her kitchen.

"I was just wondering whether you wouldn't show up! Not that you had to, but it's a good deal more fun having somebody to keep you company in the kitchen."

"Give me a towel and I'll powder not to break anything."

"You don't look as though you'd been used to work much," she said, "but take off your coat and I'll hang an apron on you."

His investiture in Mrs. Walker's simple apron made it necessary for Sally to stand quite close to him, and her number of compressing her lips as she pinned the bib to the collar of his waistcoat he found wholly charming. His heart went palpitant as her fingers, moist from the wash, brushed his chin. She was quite tall; taller than Isabel, who had fixed his standard of a proper height for girls. Sally did not giggle, but acted as normal sensible girls should act when pinning aprons on young men.

"You've never stopped here before? I thought I didn't remember you. Well, we're always glad to see the Governor, he's so funny; but say, some of the people who come along!"

"I hope," said Archie, turning a dish to the light to be sure it was thoroughly polished, "I hope my presence isn't offensive?"

"Cut it out!" she returned crisply. "Of course, you're all right. I know you were a real gait the first night I got it out. You can't find me much on human nature."

"You've always lived up here?" asked Archie, tuck under her frank approval.

"Certainly not. I was born in Missouri, a grand old state if I do say it myself, and we came here when I was twelve. I went through high school and took darning and the domestic arts in college and I'm twenty-three if you care to know."

When the kitchen was in perfect order they reported the diet to Mrs. Walker and Sally suggested that they stroll in a trout brook which was her own particular property.

He had decided to avoid any reference to the secrets of the underground trail, but his delivery received a violent shock a moment later, when they were seated on a bench beside the brook.

"Do you know," she said, "you are not like the others?"

"I don't understand," he faltered. "Oh, cut it out! You needn't try to fool me! When I told you awhile ago I thought you were nice. I meant more than that; I meant that you did not at all seem like the cranks that sneak through here and hide at our house. You're more like the Governor, and I never understand about the Governor. It doesn't seem possible that any one who isn't forced by necessity into crime would ever follow the life. Now you're a gentleman. Any one could tell that, but I suppose you're really doing something pretty bad or you wouldn't be here! Now I'm going to hand it to you straight; that's the only way."

"Certainly, Miss Walker. I want you to be perfectly frank with me."

"Well, my advice would be to give yourself up, do your time like a man and then live straight. The Governor has romantic ideas about the great game but that's no reason why you should walk the thorny road. Now pop would kill me if he knew I was talking this way. It's a funny thing about pop. All I know about him I just picked up a little at a time, and he and me never wanted to know. Ma's awful nervous about so many of the boys stopping here, for she longed to see him all the time he was showing up trains out West, and having a husband in the penitentiary isn't a pleasant thing to think about. Ma's father ran a saloon down in Missouri; that's how she got acquainted with pop, but she was always on the square, and they both wanted me brought up right."

"I wouldn't be surprised if pop didn't pull out some time and beat it for the West. It must be awful tiring for a man who's stuck pistols into the faces of express messengers and made bank tellers hand out their cash to settle down in a place like this where there's nothing much to do but go to church and prayer meetings. I don't know how many men pop's killed in his time, but there must be quite a bunch. But pop doesn't seem to worry much. It seems to me if I'd ever pumped a man full of lead I'd have a bad case of insomnia."

"Well, I don't know," remarked Archie, weighing the point judiciously. "I suppose you get used to it in time. Your father seems very gentle. You probably exaggerate the number of his—uh—homicides."

"Well, pop can be pretty rough sometimes. He and I have our little troubles."

"Nothing serious, I'm sure. I can't imagine any one being unkind to you, Sally."

"It's nice of you to say that. But I'm not perfect and I don't pretend to be!"

Graciously and tenderly argued within him at this absurd suggestion that any one could harbor a doubt of Sally's perfection. Her modesty, the tone of her voice called for some more concrete expression of his understanding than he could put into words. Her hand, dimly discernible in the dusk of the June stars, was invitingly near. He clasped and held it, warm and pulsing. She drew it away in a moment but not reluctantly.

"I wonder," she said presently, "I wonder whether you would—whether you really would do something for me?"

"Anything in my power," he declared bravely.

"What time is it?" she asked with a jarring return to practical things. She bent her head close as he held a match to his watch. It was half past eight.

"We'd have to hurry," she said. "When I told you pop and I didn't always agree about everything I was thinking—"

"Is it about a man?" he asked, curiously the worst and stealing himself for the blow if it must fall.

"It would be a long story," she said sadly, "and there isn't time to tell it, but the moment I saw you were so big and brave and strong, I thought you might help."

To be called big and brave and strong by so charming a person, to enjoy her confidence and be her chosen aid in an hour of need and perplexity profoundly touched him.

"I wouldn't trust the Governor, it's too friendly with pop for that. It's just this way," she went on dreamily. "There's a young man, Abijah Strong, who owns a farm just a little way down the road. He and I have been in love with each other ever since we went to school together, really and truly lovers. He was at college when I was so I know him very well. But pop doesn't like him, and when he found how matters stood he refused to allow me to see him any more. And he's been very hard about it. We've been waiting for a chance to run away and get married. I met him last night in the lane and everything's arranged for us to leave tonight, run to Brattleboro and be married there and then go on to Boston and wait till pop's disposed to be reasonable. He wants me to marry a preacher at Saxby Center where almost as old as pop, and has three grown children. I thought maybe you could pretend to make me out for a little ride in your car, and pick up Abijah and give us a lift. My things are all packed and hid away in the garage; so all I need to do is to get my hat."

"Of course, I couldn't come back here," Archie suggested. "Your father would be sure to vent his wrath on me."

"Oh, I'd thought of that!" she exclaimed. "But you could go on and well, somewhere for the Governor to catch up with you."

"I'd have to make sure he didn't catch up with me! He'll be mighty sure about this."

"Well, if you're afraid of him—" "Fraid? I certainly am not afraid of him," he declared contemptuously. "He and I were bound to part sometime."

Through the capriciousness of a girl he had known only a few hours he was ready to break with his comrade by unhesitatingly upsetting the domestic affairs of a home who doubtless had not figured on him to kill men who incurred his displeasure. Sally had affected him like a strong cordial and as they walked to the house he grew increasingly keen for the proposed adventure. Sally, like Isabel, had dared him to be brave, and he screwed up his courage to the sticking point.

"If you don't mind I'll take Sally for a little run down the road," he suggested casually when they found the Governor and Mrs. Walker still sleeping on the veranda.

No objection was raised by Mrs. Walker beyond an injunction not to go too long and a warning not to go without her jacket.

"No joy riding," the Governor called after them. Sally's a valuable asset of this family and I'll hold you personally responsible. Comply, for her safe return."

At the garage Sally produced a switch which Archie tossed into the car, and they were quickly humming through the lane and into the highway.

"Run by the school house when we come to it and then stop. Abijah will be there."

When the car stopped Sally jumped out and was immediately joined by a young man in whom she spoke rapidly out of Archie's hearing. Her explanation finished she brought him to the car and presented him as Mr. Strong.

"Mr. Strong is going to the minister's with us and then give us a lift toward Boston. That's ever so much better than anything we'd thought of," Abijah said.

"Whatever you say, little girl! I'll shut off the lights on my machine and get my traps."

Archie, testing his searchlight, let his beam fall upon Abijah as though by accident and found Sally's lover a very well-dressed, decent-looking fellow. All his life he would be proud of his during in saying Sally Walker from marriage with the odious widow, or and mating her with the youth of her choice. The bride and groom elect were established in the back seat and he experienced a sharp jolt as he turned, turning to ask her a question about the road, he caught them in a rapacious kiss. This was what it meant to be young and free, and youth and freedom were things he had never until now appreciated at their true worth.

"How long do we stop at Brattleboro?" he asked over his shoulder.

"Only long enough to get the knot tied," Abijah answered. "I was in town this afternoon and everything's set."

"I hope," said Sally, "you'll give the bride away; it would be just fine of you, Mr. Strong."

"I was hoping you'd ask me," he flung back. "I want to be as present in the wedding party as possible."

Sally's emphasis were ideal in a little paragon, with the minister's wife and daughter and Archie as the sole witness. The minister had only lately come to town and therefore confined his inquiries to the strict requirements of ecclesiastical and Vermont law.

"Well, Sally," Archie remarked, as he joined them, "for better or worse you are married. I certainly wish you all good luck."

"We'll be back in a week and everything will be smooth as butter," Sally declared lightly.

The wedding journey from Brattleboro to Bennington was marked by the trouble and friendliness on the part of the engine, and as neither of his passengers knew the roads Archie's good nature was severely tested by the capriciousness of the night drive.

Abijah helped with the trees but only stood helplessly while Archie poked at the engine. Sally was far more resourceful and lent her assistance with her usual good cheer, a cheer which Archie felt he would miss when he bade them goodbye at Bennington. As a mark of special favor she moved to the front seat to keep him company and facilitate the study of sign posts.

"I've put you to an awful lot of trouble," Sally remarked with real contrition. "And you've left your friend the Governor far behind. I suppose they started out in look for us in pop's machine when we didn't show up and they may be close behind us now. The only thing I'm sorry about is missing hearing pop swear when he found I had slipped."

It would be funny if they thought I'd run off with you, wouldn't it? I'd just love that!"

"I don't think it's so funny you didn't," Archie answered. "I think it was my mistake."

The groom had driven up his knees and was attempting to sleep on the back seat. It was quite improper to flirt with the newest of brides, but Sally gave tolerant ear and even encouraged Archie's protestations of admiration while Abijah bumped about in the tumbrel and now and then rolled off the seat when the encephaloped driver negotiated a sharp turn. But for Sally's disposition to make the most of her last hours with him the drive would have bored Archie exceedingly.

Sally and Abijah were eager to leave Bennington as soon as possible.

"Don't think we're not appreciating what you've done for us," said Abijah, "but Sally and I had better shake you and that machine right here. Sally's folks'll be sure to be after us and they'll just about argue we came this way."

Archie told to his son the flitting thought that Abijah was jealous. Justification of this suspicion was supported by the bridegroom's sudden anxiety to depart out of Vermont with the utmost expedition. Archie had every intention of ordering as good a breakfast as Bennington's best hotel could provide but Abijah promptly vetoed this suggestion and they ate at a lunch counter, which Archie found a most disagreeable proceeding. Abijah left Sally and Archie eating scrambled eggs while he set forth to acquire information about trains. He returned while they were still at the counter to report that a train was almost immediately available. His haste annoyed Archie, who hated being hurried at his meals. At the station Abijah hung about the baggage-room, where he had no business whatever, as though trying to create the impression that he was traveling alone. When the train came along he climbed into the smoker with his own bag, leaving Archie to wait Sally by the chair car.

Abijah's just a little afraid pop might have telephoned, you know, or be coming after us. He'll move in here when the train starts."

"I don't like to leave you like this," said Archie mournfully.

"Oh, it will be all right," Sally answered bravely. "Abijah's nervous; that's all. That was certainly some ride we had last night. I hope you'll go up to the hotel now and get a good sleep."

"Oh, I'll look out for that," Archie replied.

"I suppose we'll hardly meet again," he said with a dejection which he hoped would elicit a promise of further meetings.

"I'm afraid it will be a long, long time before I see you," she said with a lingering tenderness and wistfulness.

"I hope you're going to be very happy, Sally. And I shall think of you always as you were last night. I shall never forget our talk by the brook."

"Neither shall I," she murmured. Her lashes were wonderful; not till that moment had he done justice to her loveliness.

Belated passengers were now brushing past them in the aisle. The conductor, walking briskly along the platform, shouted all aboard with heartless finality. It seemed like the voice of doom to Archie.

"Good-by, Sally!"

He put out his hand but with a quickness that took his breath away she flung her arms round his neck and kissed him. The touch of her hand by the brook under the stars was as nothing to this. Two young girls' seeking seats gazed at the frankness and heartiness of the salutation. In old times Archie would have perished of humiliation; but an overwhelming joy filled his soul. The glances of friend-and-better nemeses who knew nothing of life and love were beneath his notice. Sally's arms were still about his neck, her lips were parted expectantly.

"You must go, honey," she whispered, and his kiss felt like a punctuation upon her last delectable word.

If she hadn't given him a gentle push toward the door he might never have reached the vestibule. Another person who shared his haste to leave the train materially assisted him by gentle pressure to the platform. His brain whirled from the intoxication of Sally's kiss—indeed the two kisses, or specifically the kiss received and the kiss returned. But his exaltation was of brief duration, for there beside him stood Isabel like an accusing angel, severe and implacable. It was she whose gentle impulsiveness had facilitated his exit from the parlor, and beyond question she had witnessed the kissing, a disagreeable circumstance that fell smotheringly upon his ecstatic mood.

WHEN THOROUGHLY COOKED PORK IS A FINE FOOD

Though pork is an excellent food it should be thoroughly cooked. This advice from the United States Department of Agriculture is especially timely during hog-killing time and Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday seasons. Failure to observe this precaution may be followed by a serious illness known as trichinosis.

This disease is caused by a small parasite which sometimes occurs in pork. The trichina parasite is microscopic in size, and consequently is never seen except in very careful microscopic examinations. Ordinarily, however, which harbor the parasite show no symptoms. Besides, pork containing trichinae generally has the same appearance as other pork.

Federally inspected meat products that are intended to be eaten without cooking or prepared in a safe manner. Consequently, any pork products bearing the Federal stamp are safe. Most cases of trichinosis occur on farms and in rural districts. Outbreaks have also occurred in cities, especially among families which retain food habits of countries where pork is commonly eaten uncooked.

Products that are especially likely to contain trichinae are raw pork in any form, smoked and dried sausage, and articles of food containing pork that has not been thoroughly cooked. Frequently an entire family may be stricken, the disease being painful and frequently fatal. It sometimes resembles typhoid fever and may be confused with that disease.

To make pork safe all that is necessary is to cook it until it reaches the stage known as "done," which is also the stage at which pork is most palatable to the average person. Since heat penetrates slowly into meat in the process of cooking, large pieces that are cooked on the outside may be imperfectly cooked at the center. Accordingly, care should be taken that the meat is cooked throughout and not merely on the outside.

FLASHES OF FLORIDA FACTS

By MORRIS FOLSOM

Fraternal Side of Life.—Florida is a many-sided state. It has a splendid social side with all of its many advantages. The essential succession of pleasant days is calculated to give placidity, contentment and gentleness to human nature, and that is reflected in societies, associations and lodges of various kinds. Every state and nation is represented in Florida. It is the most cosmopolitan state of the South. With the coming of many people from many lands they brought with them their several and particular fraternal and benevolent ideas. Accordingly there is scarcely an order or society of any sort in the country not represented in our state.

Each branch of Masonry has its lodge. The Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows and are strong and active. The cult of the roll of orders in the state would be to name all of the important ones, and these include the Elks, Red Men, Moose, Eagles, Owls, Foresters, Knights of Columbus, Macabees, United Workmen, W. O. W., etc.

Patriotic orders there are too, the Confederate and Union Veterans, and their sons and daughters in their respective organizations, the Sons and Daughters of the Revolution and societies of the different wars.

The Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and W. O. F. U., are represented in the leading cities and towns, while the various churches have in their Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and other societies for young and old.

Ornamental Grasses.—Henry Nehrling, the botanist of Naples, Fla., says there are many native grasses worthy of a place in our gardens, such as with a beauty all its own. Let me quote a paragraph from a recent article by Professor Nehrling:

"Bamboos are nothing else but grasses. They are the giants of the family. The pygmies among them remind us of the true grasses as they cover the ground in dense masses, but they always have a very different aspect when closely examined. Many of the true grasses are highly ornamental and extremely beautiful. In the temperate zone especially grasses, next to the forests, form the chief decorative material of nature. They serve to cover the earth and cover half of the landscape. But apart from their aesthetic value when growing together in a meadow or on the prairie, interwoven with lilies, phlox and a thousand other flowers, individual grasses have a beauty and elegance not half appreciated. We grow a number of exotic species—not many—and neglect our native grasses entirely. But one who keeps his eyes open may find almost in his field and swamp and woodland very beautiful species well worth a place in gardens and on lawns. Planting them on the lawn, however, to be kept closely mowed is not enough, for it does not show the often graceful and delicately colored flower spikes to best advantage. Grasses are easily cultivated, requiring but a minimum of care. Here in Florida they should be set out in November or December and never later than February. They will grow with great vigor, provided the soil is moist and has been made rich by decayed manure. With the aid of a much smaller manure, magnificent specimens can be grown in all our gardens."

Wild Animal Life in Florida.—As our time, away back in the early days before white men cut much fur in any part of the world, Florida abounded in huge animal life, the mastodon, elephant, saber-tooth tiger and other like huge and dangerous beasts, as a town by fossil remains found in many sections of the state, and their bones are now to be seen in college collections in the historical museums at St. Augustine, Gainesville, DeLand and other places, and at the offices of the state geologist at Tallahassee. Remains of the primitive horse have also been found, a little fellow about the size of the sheep. The horse, as we know him, was not found in America when the white man came, he brought that most essential animal from Europe. Turned loose it multiplied and the Indians soon made use of it, and it was long the principal source of wealth for the red man. Wild horses are still found in parts of the west.

The wood buffalo at one time was found in our forests, but he moved west before the white man, and on the great plains existed in vast numbers. Hunted for its hide, it has become extinct as a wild range animal, and now is found only in the city zoo, or on a few large farms, where its existence is maintained for show purposes.

The wild animal life of Florida is now somewhat limited in variety attractive to hunters, who want exciting sport. Our wild animals include the bear, deer, raccoons, or coons for short, opossums and rabbits. The first two are found in the deep woods or swampy sections but the latter are more neighborly and often found near towns. The coon is a cheerfully persistent animal, and no amount of hunting will drive it from its favorite haunts. Night hunting of the coon is a favorite sport. One of the small and peculiar animals—of the lizard family—is the chameleon, which cannot be considered as game or of having any known use or value. It is mentioned in the Bible, and its peculiarity is its ability to change color. It can often be bought in the curio stores with skins attached.

None of the following animals are under the protection of the game law: Bear, coons, opossums and rabbits. The deer is the only important wild animal under protection. While big wild animals are scarce in Florida yet our state has more kinds of big fish than any other.

Around the World from Florida.—It is possible to take a ship at Jacksonville and sail from the mouth of the St. Johns river straight away 5,500 miles across the Atlantic to Gibraltar and through the Mediterranean, 2,500 miles long, the earth's most famous sea, bordered by romantic lands—Spain, the pioneer explorer and master at one time of more countries than any other, Algeria, where we had our first foreign war, Carthage, great in its day, and Italy and Rome, once mistress of the world and Greece—to the Suez canal, with Jerusalem and Judea, of sacred memories, in Asia to the left and historic Egypt in Africa to the right—on the parallel of Florida—and down the Red sea, 1,200 miles to the Gulf of Aden, and across the Indian ocean, passing Ceylon, Sumatra and Borneo, to our far East possessions, the Philippines, the China sea, and leaving China, a country with a people who cultivated gardens, built bridges, had the family relation and code of ethics when the races of Europe were savages and lived in caves—to the west, Japan, with a people ambitious for world dominion, to the north, enter the earth's greatest ocean, midway crossing the international date line where a day is jumped—the Pacific, 8,000 miles to the Panama canal it has been the closest access Caribbean sea to the Gulf of Mexico, and the Strait of Florida, separating our state from Cuba, to the Atlantic and the St. Johns river back to Jacksonville, and thus traverse the shortest route around the world. And this can be made still shorter when the trans-Florida canal is built via the Withlacoochee, Ocklawaha and the St. Johns to Jacksonville. Florida is in the front yard of the United States. It has the longest salt water coast of any of the states. It is nearest the West Indies and South America, and through the Panama canal it has the closest access to the Pacific ocean. Ships can sail from Florida ports to all continents and islands of the earth. It is the best favored state in the union in this respect.

Florida is a peninsula which juts down into the sea in the shape of a huge finger as if to beckon all the world to its balmy shores, generous living opportunities and gentle skies. It is truly the playground and winter home of America. For while the northern states are covered with snow and people there are burning up their summer savings to keep the fires going, and cutting the ice in their water troughs "us folks" in Florida are in the heyday of our door life, plucking flowers, boat riding, catching fish, and eating ripe strawberries, oranges and fresh garden vegetables.

Trips for rest and recreation are now no longer considered as luxuries, but have become necessities to all classes. The human being can stand a good deal but when badly treated the abused nature demands its dues and when suffering it looks for a haven of rest and rehabilitation. The place of recuperation for the weary and worn American, who does not wish to leave his own country, is Florida. Any who should any American seeking health and comfort go abroad when Florida is so near? Fortunately, indeed, is America to have within its limits a region where one can in a day's journey be able to turn winter into summer.

WHAT IS A CITY?

When most communities become large enough they become cities by simple methods of the law. None of them have ever been denied, so far as we know, until Gilbertville, Pennsylvania, sought incorporation as a borough, and its right to become such was challenged in court. The judge who sat in judgment refused to permit Gilbertville to become a city. In his ruling he said: "There is no drug store to fill the demand for pills, perfumes, or soda water; no tailor administering to the sartorially fastidious; no regular barber applies his trade during the day time and the inhabitants must wait until evening to be shaved, shorn or bobbed. There is no lumber or coal yard, probably because only fourteen houses have been built within the last 20 years."

GLASS ATTACKS OUR PRIVATE FOREIGN LOAN POLICY

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Within the past decade it has been the policy of bankers and individuals to get the approval or disapproval of the State Department before making loans to foreign governments or industries within those governments. Senator Glass of Virginia attacked such a policy on the ground that the right of the state department to take such action was a power not granted by any law of Congress and one which was liable to embroil the United States in "bitter disputes and hostile strife."

The Senator, according to the Associated Press, declared in a formal statement that "such extraordinary power, incongruous and in every way inappropriate, is not essential for the achievement of any good purpose, but might too readily be employed in illicit and dishonest pursuits."

"Isn't it perfectly clear," he added further, "that the process itself implicitly ties the Government of the United States to those private business transactions and, in the minds of many investors, inevitably creates the impression that the foreign issues approved at Washington are superior in point of security, as well as in other respects, to investment issues not formally sanctioned by the Department of State."

"It is even suggested," said the Senator, "that, in approving these foreign loans, the government assumes a moral obligation to compel their payment."

It was stated that President Coolidge regards the question of foreign loans floated in the United States as an incident to the conduct of the foreign relations of this government and, therefore, proposes to assert his executive prerogative and not permit it to be usurped by the legislative branch. It is thought that he would use his power of veto to obstruct any measure looking to the regulation of foreign loans floated in the United States.

KISSIMMEE WARRIORS TO INVADE ST. CLOUD TOMORROW

For the third time in as many years Kissimmee's crack high school football team will invade St. Cloud, Friday, when the gladiators of those neighboring cities will plunge into a battle royal at Galloway Gardens for the play-off. In 1925 St. Cloud defeated the Kissimmee team 6 to nothing; in 1926 Kissimmee evened up by winning the St. Cloudites 9 to nothing; and it is said that tomorrow's game is anybody's until the fight has gone to a finish, due to the hard practice of both contestants and the keen rivalry existing.

Coach Hollis reports the Saint Cloud boys in splendid condition and freely predicts a clean victory for his team.

Play will start at 3 o'clock, and every minute of the game will be filled with thrills, because of the determination of both teams to put everything they have into the battle.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Ivor G. Hyndman, Minister

Our slogan is "A Friendly Church in a Friendly City."

Remarkable Attendance
There was a remarkably fine attendance at both services last Sunday. The congregations at each service were easily the largest congregations in attendance at the church on the first Sunday of November, with the possible exception of the boom year.

The offering was said to be a record for the same date.

In the morning the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor, assisted by Reverends Donald D. D. L. Lockard, W. H. Leach, N. W. Henschamp and Mr. L. M. Parker.

A most interesting feature of the service was the group communion of the High School class in company with the teacher, Mrs. L. C. Zimmerman.

In the evening Dr. Hyndman presided upon "Unjustified Possession."

At the quadrennial election held at the church on Wednesday night "Uncle Jack" Ferguson was unanimously elected as lay delegate to the Lay Electoral Conference. Mr. E. M. Ross was elected as alternate.

The various ladies organization are busy with preparations for the annual bazaar to be given November 30.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on Armistice Day service. In the evening the topic will be "China, the Unknown Quantity." Members of the choir will be attired in Chinese costume, and Chinese songsters will be displayed.

LIVINGSTON CLUB ELECTIONS

The annual election of officers was held Monday afternoon at the meeting of the Livingston Club at the home of Mrs. W. T. Adams on Ohio avenue. Officers elected were as follows: Mrs. A. H. Helm, president; Mrs. E. O. Ward, vice-president; Mrs. Dana P. Elselstein, secretary, and Mrs. E. M. Cox, treasurer.

A large attendance was present and extensive plans were made for participation in the church bazaar. Mrs. A. H. Helm, president of the club, was welcomed after an absence of several months during the summer.

After the business session refreshments were served.

SURPRISE PARTY

One of the very pleasant Halloween events was the surprise given Mrs. Cranston by members of the Women's Reading Circle, some of whom appeared in costume. For this reason it was difficult to guess who the individuals were. Two "ghosts" served delicious refreshments consisting of pumpkin pie, sandwiches, salad, pickles, cheese and doughnuts, such as only Mrs. James Campbell can make.

As it was a temperance group, English tea, brewed as Miss Elm knows so well how to do, was served instead of the customary cider.

A beautiful centerpiece of mixed fruits, tastefully arranged, graced the formal board. Place cards, Halloween post cards, with initials of names in extravagant words were unique. Mrs. Parker said no wonder she had difficulty in finding her place with a card reading "Extravagant Patti."

Those who enjoyed the hospitality of this charming home were Mesdames Riley, Campbell, Grobe, Trout, Wheeler, Landis, Maury, Parker, Warner and Misses Weeks, Richard and Mallory. The hostesses were Mrs. Cranston and Miss Elm, with Mrs. Helen Bird-Burke and Miss Mary E. Parker as "spoke" waitresses.

The rooms were decorated appropriately, cats, witches, brooms, hats and pumpkins being in evidence.

BRIDGE CLUBS ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Fred Tullis entertained five tables of bridge, comprising the members of the Friday Afternoon Club and the Wednesday Afternoon Club, at her home on Ohio avenue on Wednesday afternoon. Bridge tables with dainty acute tables were placed in the living room and on the porch for the guests.

After six progressions of bridge a luncheon of sandwiches, individual pumpkin pies with whipped cream, and coffee was served.

High score prize for the afternoon was awarded to Mrs. H. S. Dawley, while second score prize went to Mrs. Lilburn Godwin.

Those present were Mesdames H. S. Dawley, J. J. Johnston, Wm. Burns, Aaron Story, Lilburn Godwin, W. T. Adams, Miller Strayer, A. C. Rods, H. P. Zetroner, A. J. Allison, Sam Brumm, Pete Sherman, J. AN EXTENSIVE GOLF COURSE APPEARS ASSURED HERE

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB BELIEVES PLAN CAN BE WORKED OUT FOR ACCEPTANCE OF 100-120 ACRE TRACT FROM STATE

Last night's meeting of the members of the St. Cloud Business Men's Club was marked by pertinent discussions concerning the construction of an up to date golf course; the advisability of taking steps to have 15th street widened to 30 feet simultaneously with the construction of the 18 foot State Road No. 24; and the further need for the widening of Tenth street to 30 feet so that the city would have two splendid boulevards instead of one.

Mr. Steen said that he had in mind a proposition whereby some 120 acres on the southwest of First Lake could be had with a quarter of a mile lake frontage, "without the cost of one cent to a single individual," although it would require a little co-operation. He stated that he had another meeting later in the evening and for that reason and the further reason that he wanted a full membership of the club present he would defer laying the plan before the club until such time as the largest possible attendance could hear and act upon it.

The members present seemed heartily in accord with Mr. Steen's willingness to make possible the free donation of the ground and Mr. Paxson stated that Carl Dunn of Orlando had informed the committee on this proposal that he would send a golf expert here at such time as he could be of service in laying out a course and links, without cost to the people of St. Cloud.

The question of floating a small bond issue to provide for the needed work of erecting a club house and building the links was handled pro and con, with the result that everyone present assented to the general belief that the money could be raised—of not by a bond issue, by private subscription.

Wants Full Attendance

Mr. Paxson suggested that the Tribune request every member of the club to be present next Wednesday evening, so that definite action might be had and the launching of the golf course could be accomplished at the earliest possible time.

Widening of 15th Street

Deep interest was shown in the widening of 15th street to 30 feet, instead of letting it stand or rather go through at 18 feet, as the state road department would lay it down. Here the question of building a boulevard through a "farming" section of the city, as one member described it, was debated, with the thought in mind of taking care of 10th street, if any extra money was to be spent by the city from its function with the new state road on the west end to a suitable connection with the highway on the east.

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad came in for a few minutes debate, it being pointed out that in building a boulevard down 10th street the railroad property abutting to the west would upset the usual plans of laying down such streets. That is, the belief prevailed that the railroad, although abutting 10th street for quite a distance, would oppose the boulevard, if it occurred that the railroad had to bear any expense.

The double boulevard was the most subject of the evening with probably the exception of the golf course discussions, and was left rather undecided but certain to occupy serious consideration at the next meeting of the club.

Business men were especially concerned over the great outlays they said had been made on 10th street, for which reason they felt that this street should be maintained in an attractive way.

Main voters refusal to give up the direct primary system of nomination is one time when we all hope, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation."

The St. Cloud Ice Plant

CREDIT THE ICEMAN WHO WORKS WHILE YOU SLEEP

A TIMELY WORD OF PRAISE FOR AN UNFAILING FRIEND, LEST WE FORGET HIS IMPORTANCE IN WINTER AS WELL AS SUMMER

Now that the winter season is approaching, so many of us begin to neglect the beautiful job of keeping our ice boxes well filled every day that a word concerning the St. Cloud Ice Plant and its noteworthy system is entitled to print.

Notwithstanding the varying quantities needed by its patrons, the St. Cloud Ice Company maintains a 24 hour service, seven days in the week, and at all times carries a sufficient supply of ice, regardless of changing temperatures, to meet fully the demand of the household and business home refrigerator. Indeed its efficiency parallels that of a big city.

The adoption of this policy by Al Burke, manager of the local plant, is not a new one, however, but is a practice he has maintained every since he was placed in charge of the St. Cloud plant. To begin with, he has made ice production a business for a great number of years and is accredited by those who are qualified to speak with knowledge to the business in all its ramifications and for serving the people in the territory his company covers in a fashion that deserves a hundred per cent appreciation instead of a meagre "Thank you."

Furthermore, the peculiar requirements so often outlined in the manufacture of ice have been thoroughly studied out by the St. Cloud manager, and he leaves none of his knowledge concerning those, where its application can be used to produce better ice, in his daily supervision of the plant in this city, employed.

St. Cloud enjoys the service of one of the best ice plants in the state, and this gives added advantage to patrons, even in cases of emergency, due to the fact that the next nearest plant can be called upon for immediate assistance—when and if it is necessary to be called upon.

Add now, since the finest of summers spend their winters in Florida, says Mr. Burke, every ice box should be kept filled just four weeks, four months and other delicious spells. In other words, don't over-extend a dollar to pick up a penny.

ALL OSCEOLA COUNTY IS CENTERED UPON ST. CLOUD

(Continued from Page One) And on through the afternoon and evening and slightly perhaps into the following morning, there will be a series of events fully extensive to keep everyone moving and smiling.

As will be seen from the complete program of the day, appearing on another page of today's Tribune, the football game starts at 3 o'clock, when the St. Cloud and Kissimmee High school teams will go to the mat for higher laurels. At 7:15 "Little Drums of the Big War" will be seen at the G. A. R. Hall theatre. The stellar event of the day, in so far as the spectators are concerned, are concerned, will begin at 9 o'clock, the big Victory Ball at the Hunter Arms hotel, where dancing will continue throughout until probably the wee hours of Saturday morning.

The flying circus is a new feature, as well as will be the horse race between the halves of the football game. Snyder's flying circus which has just arrived in Florida after completing a series of exhibitions at the great Toronto Exposition and which was secured to help amuse the crowds here will feature Miss DeVito and Peg Maloney. Miss DeVito is the world's greatest if not only stunt flyer, wing walker and parachute jumper. The performance of this couple will actually begin in the late morning, soon after the parade gets under way it was announced, by flying over the city dropping flags and stunning the crowds on their way to the park. After the Moment 'O Silence and the beginning of the ceremonies the aviators will come to the ground and join the people in the park until the luncheon hour is over.

Then at 1:30 the stunt flying will begin at the landing field, east of the city, which can be easily located by following the arrows. Here Miss DeVito will attempt a stunt, it is said never undertaken by any other aviator. In addition to this arrangements have been made for a burro race between the halves of the football game and immediately following the game there will be an exhibition of horse riding and an attempt will be made by several local and out of town riders to ride a horse that up to the present time no man has yet succeeded in riding.

Every indication is that the parade which leaves the G. A. R. Hall at 10:30 a. m. will be the largest in the history of the city. In addition to the several local organizations which will participate it is understood that the Legion Post from Kissimmee will be out in full force and the committee together with the Marshal, Comrade Trickle wish to impress it upon every Legionnaire and members of other organizations which will take a place in the parade that their place is in the parade.

The ladies of the auxiliary have been working hard and are prepared to serve all those that so desire a dainty luncheon immediately after the exercises.

The next event is the flying circus which will be finished in ample time for all to arrive at the Athletic field at Gallion Garden for the opening of the Battle of the Century. St. Cloud High School vs. Kissimmee High School football team. Coach Hollis is confident that the local team will more than wipe out the defeat handed them a year ago at Kissimmee. If faithful training and hard work spell victory there is no doubt that our boys will be on the long end of the score. After the riding contests which follow the football game the centre of attraction will be at the G. A. R. theatre where Little Drums of the Big War will be presented, all who can should attend this performance as it is amusing and educational. Come and see the boys in the dug-outs, hospitals and at home, you will laugh with them and sympathize with them as they present these actual happenings so ably pictured by the great poet and soldier Robert W. Service.

The crowning event of the day will be the Victory Ball at the Hunter Arms Hotel. The management has left nothing undone to assure every comfort and convenience for those who attend this gala event. Dancing will commence at 9:00 p. m. and continue till 1:00 a. m. Special music has been arranged by Mr. Marvin who will conduct the orchestra. Several waiters will be included in the program as many requests have been made for this class of dancing.

INTERSTATE ASSOCIATION MEET

Both members and tourists were entertained at the meeting of the Interstate Association, which was held at the Tourist Club house at 2:30 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon, as each told of his or her experiences during the summer months. Some had some very thrilling reports, and it was a delight to one and all to be back in St. Cloud for the winter.

The meeting was opened by prayer, followed by the singing of America. The minutes of April 12 were read and approved.

Mrs. Nettie Clark, the president, appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of Rev. McCann, chaplain, and Rev. Alva Cook, past chaplain. The committee consists of Mr. Lathrop, Mrs. Elmer and Mrs. Nellie.

Mr. Lathrop will have charge of the program December 13.

The roll call of states showed members present as 18; tourists 38, making a total of 56.

The nomination and election of officers will be held at December meeting.

The meeting closed by the singing of America.

MANY ATTRACTIONS AT THE PALM THEATRE

With their fine combination of pictures and new low prices the Palm Theatre is offering their patrons in-usual picture value. Among the offerings for the coming week are:

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY
Can a brunette win a man from a blonde?

That's the question solved by "Blonde or Brunette," a Paramount Picture starring Adolphe Menjou which plays at the Palm tonight and tomorrow.

Blondes and brunettes of both sexes will want to see this film because it depicts a battle between two clever women for the love of the same man. Three marriages and two divorces are necessary before the issue is finally settled.

Greta Nissen, the Norwegian beauty who played in "Lost-a Wife" and "The King on Main Street" with Mr. Menjou, is the blonde; Arlette Marchal, a French actress last seen as Jack Holt's leading woman in "Porton River,"—the brunette.

The play, a spicy farce, adapted from the French success, "An Angel Poses," is said to be admirably suited to Menjou's unique capabilities, and one certain to enlarge his circle of admirers.

In addition there will be "French Fried," a Paramount-Christy comedy and M. G. M. News, "The World's Spotlight."

SATURDAY

For those who like snappy action pictures full of thrills and good riding Art Acord offers "Hard Fists," his latest Blue Streak Western. Along with this whirlwind picture of the West the Palm will present the latest edition of Paramount News, "The eyes of the world," and "All Bull and a Yard Wide," one of Acord's sugar coated pills of wisdom.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Marie Prevost, supported by Kenneth Thompson and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., make "Man Bait" a story that is packed with real life incidents, heart-throbs, gripping suspense, action, pathos and comedy that make for genuine entertainment.

She was a "Foxy-Dawyer" in a cheap Palais de Danse, and by the aid of the "man bait" she used, she rose to high estate and won love! Her mission was to angle for social position, and how the poor fish fell for her! Here's a picture that will warm the cockles of your heart, and quicken your blood. Eve won her way with Adam with an apple, but this modern Eve's bait was a beauty spot cunningly displayed and oh! how the men nibbled at her hook!

In addition to "Man Bait" which plays the Palm Monday and Tuesday the Three Fat Boys will offer another one of their delightful comedies, "The Three Glad Men."

WEDNESDAY

The Palm offers an unusually bright and snappy story for Wednesday, in "The Girl From Gay Paree," featuring Lovell Sherman, Barbara Bedford, Malcolm McGregor, Betty Blythe, Walter Hiers, Margaret Livingston and several others.

She was the flattest tire in town—all she borrowed the wicked glamour of the city by the scene. And then how she did belabor us socially; a hilarious comedy of appearances—a banquet of entertainment, with only the men in France.

"Heavy Hikers," a comedy featuring the Three Fat Boys and Paramount

News fill out Wednesday's bill.

Don't forget that the new prices at the Palm are now 25c for adults and 10c for children, with a special Saturday matinee at 5c and 20c.

P. K. "What Price Glory" will be shown at the Palm soon. See it at home.

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

Lesson Text—Hosea 11:1-9; 14:4-8

The strain of intense and of forceful warning of judgment has run through the prophecies of Hosea up to the eleventh chapter. Here the thought turns to the mercies of love, and to loving expressions of pity over the impending ruin of Israel.

As the mouthpiece of God, the prophet says: "When Israel was a child, then I loved him and called my son out of Egypt" (v. 1). He thinks of the nation as having a lifetime relationship to that of an individual, running from infancy, through youth to adulthood.

How wonderfully God had manifested His love over the fathers of this nation! The descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob had been under His loving watch-care during all their oppressions under the Pharaohs. It was by His call that Moses had been separated, trained, commissioned, and made, under God, the deliverer of the people from their bondage. We may well afford to reflect upon God's goodness toward us in our childish and foolish ways.

It is interesting to notice that the words, "I called my son out of Egypt," are quoted by Matthew as having an application to Jesus Christ (Matt. 2:15). As uttered by Hosea, they refer historically to the God of this world's goodness in calling Israel out of Egypt. Matthew points to it as fulfilled in the infant Jesus, who was for a time sent into Egypt, and again brought out of it. This arose from the typical connection between the Messiah and Israel. He was the persecuted Israel, the true seed of Abraham. This discovery for us a bond of connection between the old and new dispensations.

Each child of God is, indeed, called out of the Egypt of this world. It is God's love as revealed on Calvary's cross that has made the way out. It is a call for a new birth, in the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit, and set out on our journey to the heavenly City. The pity is that many who have started this journey have paused by the way, as did Israel, to offer meaningless sacrifices and to turn toward false religions (v. 2).

Again and again, God in His love has to stoop and pick up His wayward children "by the arm" (v. 3) and by His providences lift them out of the compromising situations into which they have gotten themselves. Were it not for His promise: "I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness" (Isa. 41:10), most of us would stand little chance of reaching the heavenly shore.

"I drew them" (not drove them) "with the cords of man" (v. 4). This suggests the gentleness of God in dealing with Israel. He did not use rods, lashed to a headstrong, untamed bull, or the cords were "bands of love." In spite of their rebelliousness, God continued, as He does with us, to use all the sweet attractions which His manifested love naturally creates. What a responsibility is ours who are drawn by the cords of Christ, the supreme manifestation of His love!

"I was to them as they that take off the yoke of their jaws" (v. 4). It is the figure of the kind husbandman. The yokes of oriental countries were heavy and ill-adapted to the comfort of an animal while eating. "I brought food to them and raised them to eat," He continues. Has our Lord done less for us? He puts an "easy yoke" upon us (Matt. 11:23-29) and He puts before us "the bread of heaven" (Jn. 6:32). Oh, inexhaustible love! Who can afford to scorn it?

Alas, how many are drawn who will not come! How many, like the Israelites of old, hear the voice of God from the cross; in their sorrows and afflictions; in the invitations and warnings of the Bible; to which they pay no heed! Did anyone ever heed His voice in vain? Have not thousands rushed on in their rejection of His call? Of the Lord had to "compensate" their rejection and devour them because of their own counsels" (v. 6).

"How shall I give thee up?" (v. 8). This is God's thought as the hour approaches when judgment must fall upon a people fast reaching the limits of sin. These words and those of Chap. 14:4-8 can scarcely be heightened in their beauty by any word of comment. The very heart of the God of love seems revealed.

Remember—this is the God of the Old Testament, concerning Whom some of the modern critics are making such a terrible fuss. He is precisely the same God revealed in the New Testament—the God who laid bare His heart by giving His only begotten Son to die for our sins. The Israelites were no strangers to the fact that "God is Love."

Of necessity, stringent and stern re-bukes for sin had to be given a people who, although so highly privileged, persisted in hardening their hearts toward God. Oftentimes terrible revelations of impending judgments had to be given. For the sake of checking the progress of sin in the human race, wicked nations had to be completely cut off. When our learned critics become as wise as God, they will see that it was right, because absolutely necessary.

This strain alone, however, does not do justice to the tenderness and loving pity of Israel's God. Over and over again God told His people that He had no pleasure in bringing ruin even on the multitudes of sinners. He did not then, and He does not now, punish in the spirit of vindictiveness. He will always spare the sinner, and forbear even to chastise, if He can do so wisely and safely. No sinner, however severely punished, can ever blame God. It is our own refusal to confess and forsake our sins that brings the rod upon us.

Let us not fail to notice the attractive characters by which God is introduced in Chap. 14:4-8. He is the Healer of the deep-seated diseases of backsliding and apostasy (v. 4). Probably though we may be, He "loves as freely" (cf. Jn. 13:1). He gives Himself and all of His infinite resources to restore and bless the wayward.

"I will be as the dew unto Israel," He declares (v. 5). "This silent, refreshing and invigorating force is the Scriptural emblem of the Holy Spirit. By this divine touch, the soul grows up rapidly and luxuriantly 'as the lily' (v. 5). The life touched by this heavenly dew is the life of fragrance and beauty. It is the life that, like the deeply rooted cedars of 'Lebanon' (v. 6) has a foundation that will withstand the fiercest of winds.

"The beauty shall be as the olive tree" (v. 6). A life thus divinely invigorated will send its branches in every direction and will produce the elements which shall provide healing and nourishment for others.

Assuredly these are not words to Israel alone. This spiritual healing, this refreshing, this growth as beautified as the blooming lily, as fruitful as the spreading olive, is for all who will look unto the God of love and be saved. Let these words become reality to you today by looking away to that green hill beyond the city walls, where God poured out His love to mankind in the gift of His Son, to atone for all our sins.

PITH AND POINT

Whom God loves He calls out of bondage (v. 1) of Gal. 3:1.

"This better thine to add the way than even once to go astray."

He who would have victory must follow his back-track and get right with God.

Any man can backslide, but only the fool will continue in it.

Remember that when spiritual progress ceases, backsliding has begun.

A God ALL-mercy would be a God unjust.

God desires to exhaust all means of kindness before He takes hold on justice.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

Has God ever dealt with any nation just as He did with Israel? (Hos. 11:1-4; Cf. Ps. 147:19-20.)

Did God have a special purpose in separating Israel from other nations? (Deut. 7:6-8.)

What seven things did God do for Israel? (Hos. 11:1-4.)

In what sense was Israel just as ready to hold up the individual believer today for the apostasy? (Hos. 11:3; Cf. Isa. 41:10; 42:1.)

Does He still draw men with the same bands of love? (Hos. 11:4; Cf. Jn. 6:44; 12:32.)

What yoke of bondage has He taken away from Christians (Israel) the death of Christ? (Hos. 11:4; Cf. Gal. 3:1.)

What does God say to His backsliding children today? (Hos. 11:4; Cf. 1 Jn. 1:9.)

What happens if they persist in backsliding? (1 Cor. 11:32.)

GOLDEN TEXT ILLUSTRATION

"I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings" (Hosea 6:6).

A clever painter in London once exhibited a piece representing a priest going through his devotional exercises. Viewing the painting at a distance, one would think the priest to be in a praying attitude. His hands were clasped and held to his breast. His eyes looked up toward the ceiling. He appeared to be quite absorbed in humble adoration and devout meditation. Taking a nearer survey, one discovered that the work which seemed to be before him was a bowl. Between his upturned hands was a lemon, the juice of which he was squeezing into a dish below. His eyes were watching a mark near the ceiling. What a representation of the man who merely goes through the forms of worship, but bears in his life none of the fruit of the Spirit. The least offerings of the Levites were appointed of God, but when the offerings became mere empty ceremonies, and the people had lost all knowledge of what God requires, they were a stench in God's nostrils.

AMOS PRAISES THE ORLANDO BUILDING AND LOAN ASS'N

SAYS ORANGE COUNTY'S BIGGEST BUILDING AND LOAN INSTITUTION IS IN SPLENDID CONDITION

While in Orlando last week Hon. Bruce Amos, comptroller, made an investigation of the Orange County Building and Loan Association, this inquiry having been followed by a recent examination of its affairs by the department.

Upon his departure Mr. Amos issued the following statement over his signature regarding the Orange County Building and Loan Association:

"I came to Orlando primarily to look into some matters of the Orange County Building and Loan Association brought about by a recent examination of its affairs by the department.

"It gives me pleasure to say its affairs are managed by a very strong board of directors, who give unselfishly of their time to its business for mutual compensation and have succeeded in building up a very strong institution of the permanent investment type. It is solvent and is free from any 'promotion' or any expense of that nature and its stockholders would, in my judgment, make a serious mistake in exchanging its shares for the stock or security of any other company."

Carolina and California Meat Recipes which Satisfy

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of cooking articles by 6 famous cooks.)

"Almost everyone enjoys meat," says Miss Rosa Michaelis, the New Orleans cooking authority. "It's highly nutritious, because of its high protein content. It contains valuable fats, mineral salts, and important vitamins."

Carolina Brailed Steak

"Steak is especially good when prepared Carolina brailed," says Miss Michaelis. "It is a sure way to select a tender steak, preferably 1 1/2 inches thick. "Have the skillet piping hot, and sear the steak, searing it quickly. Turn after two turns, and try not to puncture the steak. Keep all the juices in. "Steak should be cooked rare in 10 minutes. Well done in 14. When done as you prefer, place on a heated platter. Season with pepper and butter, and serve piping hot."

"For frying steak you need a very hot fire. If you use an oil stove with long chimney burners, you will get most satisfactory results by turning the flame down to low, and then, about 15 inches high above the blue zone."

California Peppers

Mrs. Belle DeCraf, San Francisco home economics counselor, is very fond of California stuffed peppers and West Coast pot roast.

"For the former, select short, plump peppers; cut off tops and remove seeds. Put in a saucepan and cover with boiling water in which has been added a bit of soda. The size of a pea. Let peppers stand in water about 10 minutes. Drain and place each pepper in a greased muffin pan. Then fill with the following mixture:

Mix 1/4 cup boiled rice with 1 cup of minced ham and 1 cup of sautéed onions. Add 2 tablespoons of melted butter to a cup of dry bread crumbs and place on top of filling. Serve with sauce."

West Coast Pot Roast

Select not less than 4 pounds of beef from the round. With a sharp pointed knife make deep incisions and force in stuffed olives. Make about 15 incisions. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper then dredge with flour.

Heat 2 or 3 tablespoons of beef drippings and brown meat on all sides. Then add 2 cups of boiling water. Use 1/2 teaspoon salt and one onion for each pound of meat. Slice 2 whole olives in each onion and add to meat.

Cover closely and cook over a low flame under boiling point until meat is tender, about 2 hours for each pound of meat. Keep about the same amount of water in the kettle, adding more as it cooks away. When cooked, remove meat and onions and thicken gravy.

The best oil stoves are designed for women's convenience and comfort. Their cooking surface is 12 inches from the floor, just like a kitchen table. This makes bending or stooping totally unnecessary.

Veal Birds

Try veal birds once, and you'll want to cook them often in the way suggested by Mrs. Kate Brown Vaughn, director home economics department, Los Angeles Evening Express.

4 sliced veal off loin cut thin (1 1/2 lbs.)
Flour, salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons bread crumbs
Savory Dressing
1 tablespoonful lemon juice
1/2 onion
2 tablespoonful butter
1/2 cup cream

Brown veal on one side. Dredge with flour, salt and pepper and put in the center of each a tablespoonful of bread crumbs seasoned with savory dressing and a few drops of lemon juice and onion (1/2).

Bring the birds together as nearly in the shape of a bird as possible and tie with a string. Fry slowly until a golden brown in two tablespoonful butter in a pudding pan. Then cover with 1/2 cup cream. Place in hot oven for 10 minutes (425° F.). Remove the cover from the vessel and allow to brown for seven minutes. The drippings in the pan may be used for gravy, if liked.

Ham and Raisin Sauce

Ham with raisin sauce is delicious, and can be cooked in 15 minutes according to Mrs. Vaughn's recipe.

1 slice ham (1 lb. 10 oz.)
1 cup brown sugar
1 tablespoonful cornstarch
1/2 cup water
1 cup vinegar
1/2 cup raisins

Place slice of ham in oven 400 degrees F. in a small baking pan. Mix sugar, cornstarch in saucepan and add water and vinegar slowly, stirring until thick. Add raisins. Cook ham for 40 minutes, pour the raisin sauce over ham and continue to cook for 10 minutes longer.

Mildewed linens may be restored by wetting and snipping the spots. Then cover with finely powdered snail and rub it in well.

URGES BUSINESS TO MAINTAIN PRESENT HIGH STANDARDS

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Declaring that American business is today setting the standard for the business and financial practice of the entire world, H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange, in an address here yesterday before the association of commerce warned against a laxity which might undermine the foundations of honest and efficient business progress in the United States. Such a development, he said, would soon destroy the leadership we have gained.

"Since the Armistice," the speaker declared, "Europe has earnestly been studying our business methods, our corporate practice, and our commercial and financial laws and customs. To initiate the American way in all these things has become almost a fetish in many great European countries. The danger is that in their whole-hearted admiration of our ability to create and equitably distribute our enormous national wealth, the European countries may be led to copy the bad as well as the good features of American business practice. Our present prosperity may well blind the foreign student to many defects in our laws and our practice relating to business-like fraud which we have not yet succeeded in overcoming."

For this reason, Mr. Simmons continued, American business can scarcely afford to overlook the quality of our commercial and financial methods because of our gratification at their constantly expanding scope. It remains for American finance to render this country not only the most profitable but also the safest nation in which to invest surplus funds. "American leadership in business and finance," he said, "is necessarily postulated on the honesty and integrity of our markets and our business dealing. If laxity be allowed through prosperous years to undermine the foundations of honest and efficient business in the United States, our present commercial and financial leadership in the world is destined to be short-lived and temporary. We have therefore ever present before us the added incentive to accomplishment and to definite action against fraud, which is provided by the conviction that we are not only working in these matters for the maintenance of business prosperity in our own time, but for the permanent establishment of a firm basis for continued business prosperity far into our national future."

Discussing the problem of security frauds, Mr. Simmons said that if security swindling is really to be halted through the efforts of American business men, this can only be accomplished by a continual and persistent mobilization of public opinion and public action against the vendor of fraudulent stocks and bonds.

He said that a wide degree of co-operation between the forces of government on the one hand and the leading business interests on the other has been achieved. There is no doubt whatever of the fact that serious inroads on the security swindling industry have been made. The efforts of the fraudulent promoter have been made more difficult in the past few years than ever before.

"Nevertheless," Mr. Simmons went on, "I feel very strongly that the present is no time for mere complacency. We have not yet sufficiently suppressed security frauds in this country so that we can afford to consider the fight over and done with. The present is rather a time for renewed vigilance and intensified effort against fraud, and the degree of success which has already attended our efforts should only spur us on to more consistent and persistent efforts in the future."

Pointing out that bucketing, by reason of a long period of "bull market," has been reduced to minor dimensions as a current problem in American finance, the speaker said that the present is therefore a propitious time for redoubling our efforts to make sure that the bucket-shop will not reappear when economic conditions are more favorable to it. "We have scorched the snake," Mr. Simmons said, "but not killed it."

"But if the continuance of prosperity in this country," he continued, "and its corollary of steadily rising security prices have proved a body blow to the bucket-shop operator, they have favored and assisted the other and more numerous class of fraudulent security salesmen. Prosperity indeed provides a very favorable background for the creation and disposal of worthless securities. The appetite of the public for securities, rendered more keen by the large profits made through our economic structure, becomes less and less discriminating, and more and more credulous. Thus the stage is set in prosperous times for a serious increase in the security swindling business."

Despite the effect on credulous security buyers of continually mounting security prices and continued reports of higher company earnings, the security swindler's life, has not been a particularly happy one, Mr. Simmons stated. He referred to the work done by "the tireless inspection force of the United States Post Office Department," and to the cooperation of the state officers operating under the authority of the various blue sky and fraud laws of our different states, and to the better Business Bureau organizations now established in so many American cities, which he said, were "everywhere more than justifying their existence by their unremitting vigilance, their unflinching courage, and their practical and definite accomplishments."

NOVEMBER IS TIME TO BREED FOR SPRING PIGS

Farmers should strive to secure two litters a year from every brood sow on the farm. To do this sows must be given more attention than they receive in many cases. A sow turned out to pasture for herself cannot bring into the world more than one litter of strong, healthy pigs a year. With a little attention, that costs no money, and with a little extra feed, that is usually grown on the farm at a small outlay, the same sow will bring two litters a year easily. In this way a farmer can secure from his one sow what his neighbor will secure from his two, following the method of letting the sows raise for themselves.

It is easy to produce two litters a year in Florida if the proper attention is given to the breeding animals. Sows which are expected to farrow in the spring should be bred during October and November, first half of November being a very desirable time. John M. Scott, animal industrialist, of the University of Florida Experiment Station, places the breeding period between October 15 and November 15. This will bring pigs in February. The sows may be bred in April or May to farrow again in August or September. This fall litter will be out of the way by the time to breed again for the next spring litter.

If the sows are in good condition when the pigs are weaned, they should breed within three days afterward.

LOOK AT THE VALUE OF MANY FLORIDA GROWN FOODS

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—There are many Florida-grown foods in season now which are especially healthful, says Dr. Ouida Davis Abbott, of the home economics division of the Florida Experiment Station. Most of these foods are regarded as somewhat commonplace, but they provide the salts which are essential to health, and help to regulate the body processes.

Oranges and grapefruit are low in protein, but high in carbohydrates and mineral salts. They contain vitamins which prevent scurvy and they also help regulate normal body functions. Cabbage and rutabagas are likewise low in protein but high in carbohydrates and salts. Turnips and turnip greens are other foods which should be on Florida tables at this time.

All of the vegetables contain vitamins A, B, and C. They are also particularly rich in minerals, especially in iron, calcium, and phosphorus.

Peas are very high in protein and fat. The proteins are of good quality and complete. Peas may be used as a substitute for meat or fats but not for eggs or dairy products.

While exploring the lofty Rwenzori Mountain range in Africa, Doctor James P. Chapin and D. L. Sage of the American Museum of Natural History found glaciers within fifty miles of the equator.

The new bridge joining Duval and St. Johns counties has been opened. It cost one hundred thousand dollars.

The First Christian church of Jacksonville is constructing a $25,000 church at Church and Julia streets. It will be of brick and two stories high.

A GOVERNMENT MAP OF MISSISSIPPI FLOOD AREA

A map of a large part of the Mississippi Valley just issued by the Geological Survey, department of the interior, should prove useful to students of the great national problem now before the country as a result of the recent disastrous floods of the Mississippi.

The Mississippi is a river of floods. When first seen by white men, at the time De Soto discovered it, the river was in flood. For millions of years these floods have been building the valley and delta of the Mississippi. So long as the valley was inhabited only by a primitive people, the floods did little or no damage. The Indians who happened to be near the river simply moved back to higher ground with little inconvenience and let the floods pass. The great Mississippi basin is, however, too valuable to remain unused. No other river basin on the globe combines topography, soil, and climate to make as attractive living conditions as those of the Mississippi. The basin will therefore be used more and more as the population of the country increases and its needs for food and other products of the lands are enlarged. With increased development and use of the valley lands the floods have become more serious in the danger to both life and property, and the record flood of 1927 has called public attention to the appalling fact that effective plans must be made for keeping the damage from flood waters within bounds.

As a result of this interest, there has been an insistent demand for a base map of that part of the basin which is affected by floods, on which the various plans for flood control might be shown. Such a base map has therefore been prepared by the Geological Survey, extending from Duquenois to the Gulf and from beyond Omaha, Tulsa, and Houston on the west to Chicago, Evansville, and Tuscumbia on the east, embracing a region about 900 miles long and 600 miles wide. The scale of the map is approximately 16 miles to the inch. It may be obtained from the Geological Survey, Washington, at 50 cents a copy.

HOW TO MAKE THE HENS LAY IN WINTER

By SPUDS JOHNSON

Winter is the time when eggs are generally scarce, and consequently sell for a high price. The hens have been laying heavily through the summer, and eggs have been cheaper. People, who keep poultry could obtain a considerable amount more profit if they could get more eggs through the winter months, even if they got less through the summer.

It is possible to get more winter eggs than are now being obtained in a large number of poultry flocks. Following are some points that should be considered in this connection.

Pullets and hens, to do their best, should be comfortably housed. Provide plenty of ventilation, but avoid drafts. Colds and roup are generally the result of birds being in poorly ventilated houses.

Cleanliness is absolutely essential. Have clean houses, clean birds, clean feed, and clean water.

Parasites, both external and internal, retard egg production.

Provide some form of green feed each day. It contains minerals and vitamins, both of which are essential. Such feeds as kale, collards, rape sprouted seeds, Bermuda, etc., are being used by poultry raisers.

Oyster shell, charcoal, and grits should be available in open hoppers.

Feed a well balanced ration. The concentrates consist of a mash and scratch feed. The common method of feeding is to have large open hoppers in which the dry mash is put. The birds can consume this dry mash all day. Provide a non-wasting hopper and one that can be cleaned. Place the water fountain near the mash hopper. This will induce a greater mash consumption.

The grain or scratch feed is fed either once or twice a day. If twice, feed only a small amount in the morning and the greater part at night.

Adapt a feeding practice and follow it out with regularity.

Love, and assume the role of prosecutor in the quo warranto suit, in view of the fact that it was brought through this office.

The Conner's highway act authorizing purchase of the road, a route which traverses three South Florida counties, and created an engineering board to appraise the property, and a commission to effect its purchase. The heavy guns of those attacking the act are trained upon the board and commission.

The supreme court has just advised counsel in the quo warranto suit that a period of over 40 days will be allowed for the filing of briefs for and against a quashing of a demurrer.

BREVARD COUNTY MAY SOON BOAST ONE OF THE GREATEST POULTRY INDUSTRIES IN THE SOUTH

R. F. ELLIS, A NATIONAL POULTRY EXPERT, IS DEVELOPING THIS BIG INDUSTRY NEAR MELBOURNE

The dreams of R. F. Ellis, national poultry expert, who a few months ago located near Melbourne for the purpose of organizing and establishing a poultry industry, have come true, according to a survey Mr. Ellis' achievement made by the Times-Journal of that city.

The enterprise has been launched and is forging ahead even beyond the most sanguine expectations the report says.

Due to the marked interest being taken in the poultry business in the vicinity of Rockledge and the success that those who have engaged in it have accomplished where they employed the proper methods, it is interesting to note the marked advancement Mr. Ellis has made in such a short time. It is said that he will soon have the largest poultry industry in the south and that it may rival the famous Petaluma poultry colony or industry in California.

In an open letter to the poultrymen of the country, Mr. Ellis says:

Are you making $5.00 a year on a hen? Would an opportunity to do so in large flocks be of interest to you? I am seeking to associate with myself 100 poultry breeders to produce the foundation stock for this Colony, and we are prepared to enter into a contract with them, guaranteeing them a definite return. Let me explain.

It is being asked in some quarters: "Is there danger of over-production in eggs?" The answer is "No!" The 1924 Year Book of the U. S. Department of Agriculture states that our average citizen eats some 16 dozen eggs a year. Yet the Canadian who does not differ essentially from us eats 26 dozen a year!

Why is this so? Better selling methods: their Department of Agriculture has brought about government standardization of eggs. This has increased the consumption of eggs 50 per cent in the last five years. Why? The public buys with more confidence. We can do the same. Eggs are not over-produced—they are under-sold.

On all hands there is talk of Farm Relief: some way must be found to get the farmer better prices. Farm Relief will come not by charging the consumer more, but by getting the farmer more of the dollar the consumer is now paying. Intelligent students of the farm marketing problem agree that the solution starts with controlled production, and ends in collective or co-operative marketing. This means that farming must be organized along industrial lines. This can best be done in the poultry business by joining a large group of people together into a colony where the best modern practices can be put into effect. These are buying supplies in large quantities, standardizing the product and marketing under a brand name in large quantities, maintaining large hatcheries and efficient breeding establishments for the benefit of all, and having the best expert advice available. In short, cooperation.

CONNORS ROAD CASE MAY GO UNTIL NEXT YEAR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Indications are that the state supreme court will not pass upon the litigation testing the constitutionality of the Conner's highway act before next year.

Two suits against the act of the legislature of 1927 authorizing purchase by the state of the highway are now going to the appellate tribunal. One is in the form of an appeal from a decision of Circuit Court Judge E. C. Love, of Quincy, in effect holding the act unconstitutional, and granting a restraining order against carrying out its provisions, and quo warranto proceedings instituted by a Jacksonville law firm through the attorney general's office.

Attorney General Fred H. Davis, who has been made both prosecutor and defender in the two appeals, has asked the court to hear and consider both simultaneously. Mr. Davis has appealed from the decision of Judge

Years of Leadership

Since before the days of the "big freeze," when seedlings bore our citrus crops, when ox carts hauled the fruit loosely packed in barrels, before good roads when sand offered the only traction for slow moving vehicles . . . Since 1893, Wilson & Toomer Fertilizer Company has led all others in supplying fertilizers to Florida fruit growers and farmers—every year with hardly an interruption.

Today, good roads honeycomb the state, railroad mainlines are double-tracked, highly developed marketing organizations handle fruit of good quality from budded trees, and motor trucks haul the crop to central points where it is attractively wrapped, labeled and crated. Today, as well, Wilson & Toomer Fertilizer Company continues to lead in Florida fertilizer sales.

The popularity of Ideal Brand Fertilizers through all these years is conclusive evidence of the preference of Florida fruit growers and truck farmers, for in these past 34 years these producers have purchased more Ideal Brand Fertilizers than any other kind.
